

Los Angeles County

The Los Angeles County Courthouse downtown.
Part 10 of 25: El Pueblo.

Los Angeles County

© 2012 by Larry Stevens
stevens.lawrence@comcast.net

El Pueblo
Chinatown
Union Station
Japantown
Warehouse District
Toy District

El Pueblo

The City Hall as seen from the old plaza.

El Pueblo

El Pueblo

(December 2006)

El Pueblo

(December 2006)

El Pueblo

(December 2006)

El Pueblo

(December 2006)

El Pueblo

(December 2006)

El Pueblo

(December 2006)

El Pueblo

The old plaza church still serves the local parish.
(December 2006)

El Pueblo

Olvera street was turned into a commercial area in 1930. There are 27 historic buildings along the alley. (December 2006)

El Pueblo

(December 2006)

El Pueblo

(December 2006)

El Pueblo

(December 2006)

El Pueblo

(December 2006)

El Pueblo

(December 2006)

El Pueblo

(December 2006)

El Pueblo

(December 2006)

Metropolitan Transit Building

(December 2006)

Post Office

(December 2006)

Chinatown

Chinatown was located where Union Station is now. The city moved it over to Broadway to build Union Station. Now Chinatown is being jammed full of condos and apartments. Even Walmart wants to build a store here.

Chinatown

(December 2006)

Chinatown

(December 2006)

Chinatown

(December 2006)

Union Station

Union Station was built in 1939. Ninety trains leave each day from the 12 tracks that serve the station.

Union Station

(December 2006)

Union Station

(December 2006)

Union Station

(December 2006)

Union Station

(December 2006)

Union Station

(December 2006)

Union Station

(December 2006)

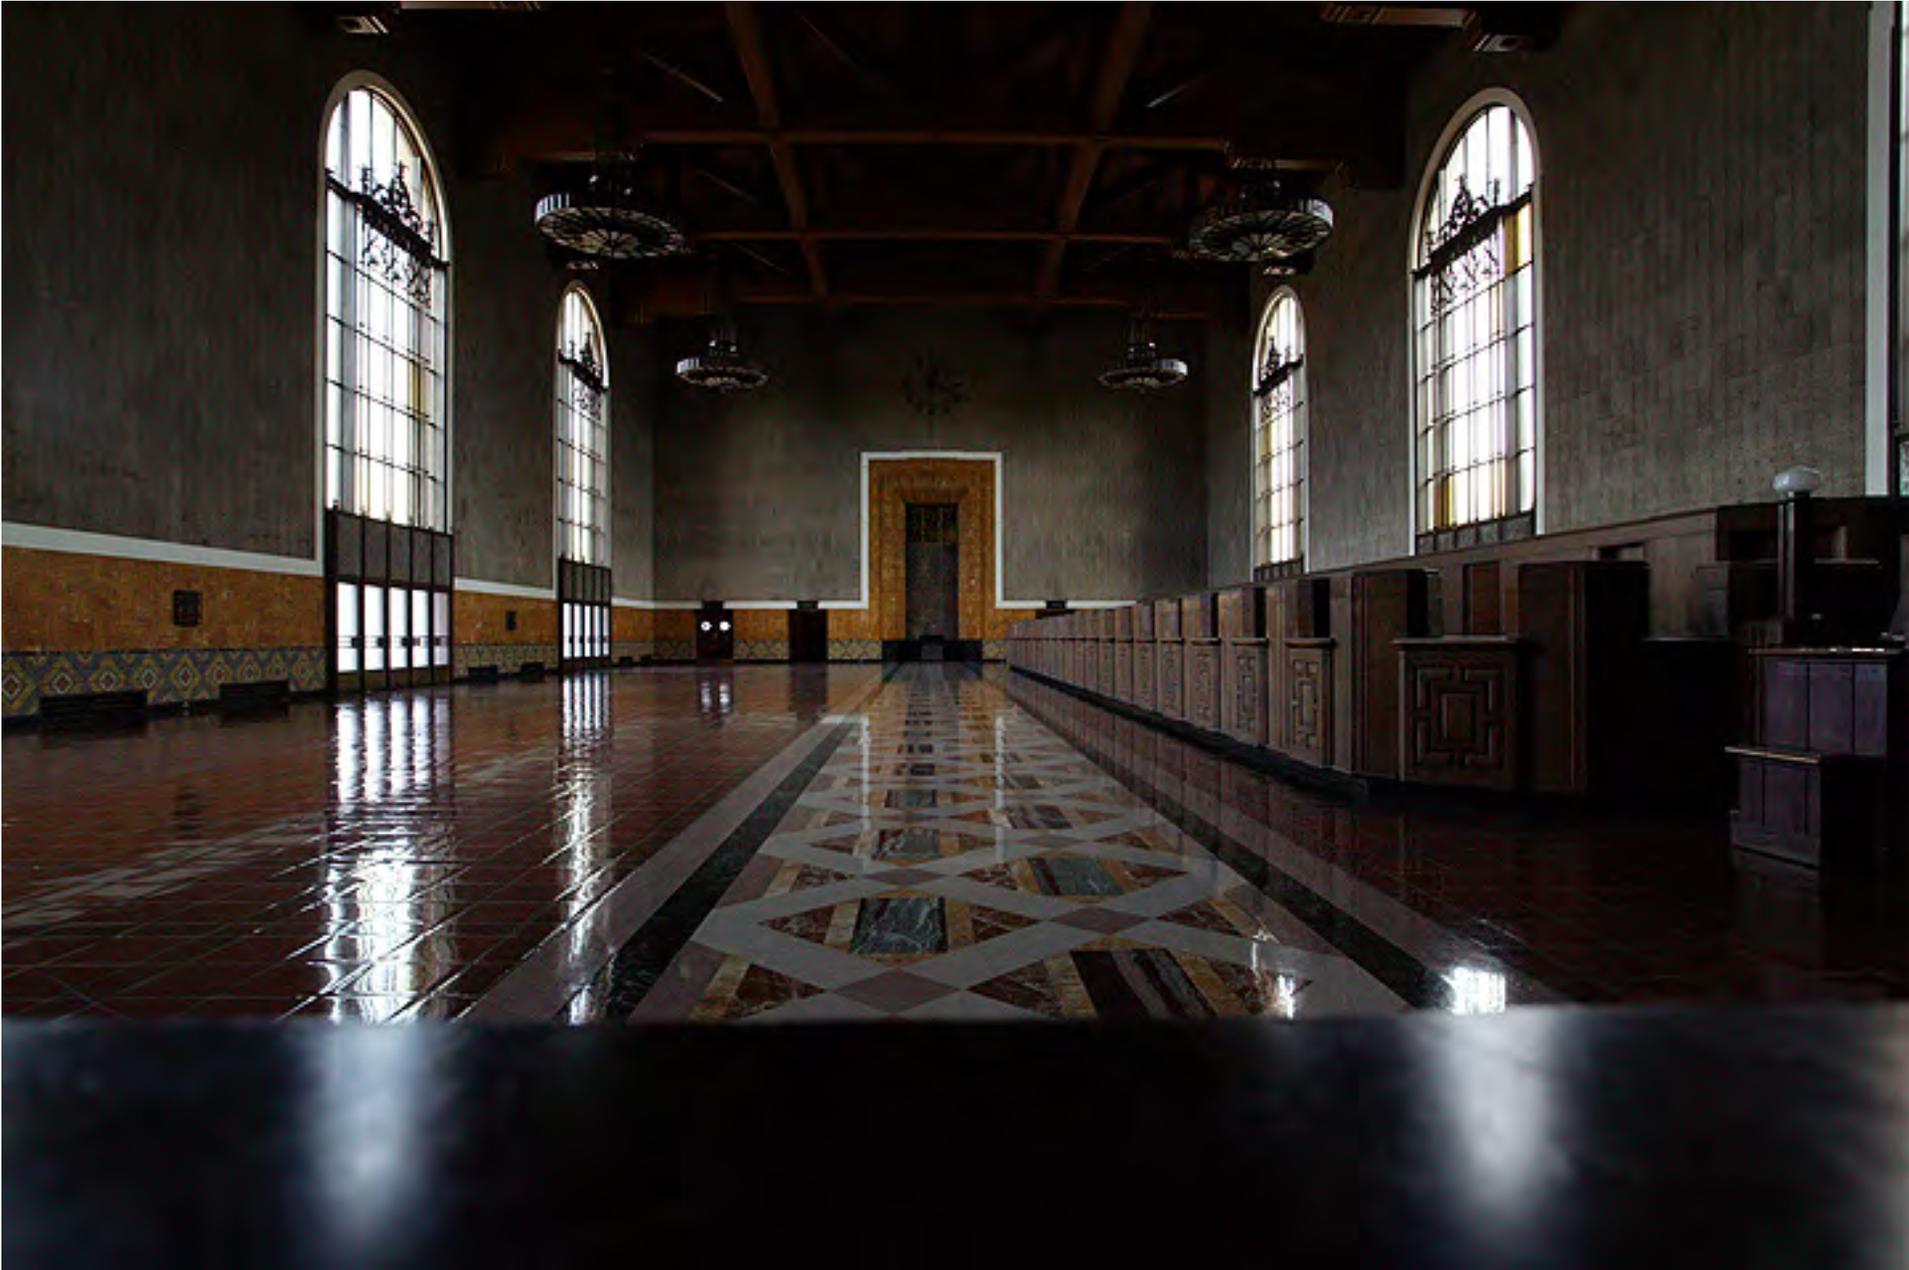

Union Station

(December 2006)

Union Station

(December 2006)

Union Station

(December 2006)

Union Station

(December 2006)

Union Station

(December 2006)

Union Station

(December 2006)

Union Station

(December 2006)

Union Station

(December 2006)

Union Station

(December 2006)

Union Station

(December 2006)

Union Station

(December 2006)

Performing Arts High School

(December 2006)

Performing Arts High School

This is a new high school on Sunset across from Chinatown. It is named for the first Hispanic Superintendent of schools.

Japantown

(December 2006)

Japantown

(December 2006)

Japantown

This is one of three official Japantowns in the United States. The other two are San Francisco and San Jose. (December 2006)

Japantown

(December 2006)

Japantown

(December 2006)

Japantown

(December 2006)

Japantown

(December 2006)

Japantown

The building with the Chop Suey sign is an historic Japantown building. (December 2006)

Japantown

(December 2006)

Japantown

(December 2006)

Japantown

(December 2006)

Japantown

(December 2006)

Central Ave.

The first Coca Cola plant was built in 1895. This 1939 design tied together several plants. It is streamline modern in the shape of a ship. It was done by Robert Derrah. (December 2006)

Warehouse District

(December 2006)

Warehouse District

This was the African American fire house when the department was segregated. It is across from the Coca Cola plant.

Warehouse District

(December 2006)

Warehouse District

This is the Produce Mart on Alameda Street. It covers several blocks.

Toy District

Downtown is divided into several different districts – jewelry, garment, toy, etc. The Toy District is where the homeless hang out. (December 2006)

Toy District

(December 2006)

Toy District

I've read that there are 10,000 permanent homeless in downtown. They live in tents on the sidewalks. We saw people bringing food in cars. (December 2006)

